NETHERLANDS MAIL in TIMES of TURMOIL Volume 1 1568–1795 by Kees Adema FRPSL

The main objective of this study of Dutch field post and related subjects has been to cover philatelic aspects of correspondence related to wars, military operations, upheavals and civil unrest. This is Volume 1 of three. All three Volumes are to be in the English language only, in hardback binding, US letter format (279 x 216 mm) and colour throughout. The book has xiv + 168 pages.

To appreciate how and why the mail was carried, an understanding of each conflict or war is crucial. The historic, military and political background of the period in question and chronologies of relevant events puts the philatelic aspects into their proper historical context. In this way the reader's curiosity will be stirred.

This first volume covers the period from the start of the Dutch revolt against Spanish rule until the end of the United Netherlands Republic in 1795. Many letters are related to the constant involvement by England and France in the European conflicts of the day and their effect on Belgium and Netherlands.

This trilogy should appeal to the philatelist as well as the historian. Besides the historical context, postal courier routes, tariffs and catalogues of postal markings for the mail covered are also included, although examples of some postal markings in this earlier period are not plentiful. RAILWAY DISASTER MAIL by Robin Gwynn FRPSL, FRPNZ and Norman Hoggarth

This new book deals with mail damaged on the Railways - Railroads by whatever means, anywhere in the world. A 326 page hardback book with colour throughout, it opens a doorway for collectors wishing to pursue a branch of postal history to which until now there has been no printed guide: railway disaster mail.

The listing in this volume records cachets, labels and explanatory post office letters used on or with items recovered from rail casualties, also manuscript notes where it seems probable that they were or may have been written by postal authorities. It also includes a handful of cases where no specific explanatory markings or letters are known, but surviving mail can definitely be proven to have been involved in rail accidents. Wherever possible, factual reports have been cited giving details of accidents and background information.

Not only are accidents, derailments and train collisions included but so are train fires, hijackings, hold-ups, looted mail and theft, and the results of train collisions with motor vehicles, natural disasters, washouts, boulders on tracks, land and snow slides, and acts of war. Even Highway Post Office vehicles are included.

Mail from 34 different countries Argentina to Yugoslavia, and Disasters between 1850 and 1995, covering 528 different events is recorded providing a wealth of information for the Postal, Social or Railway Historian. This book opens up a previously unexplored area.

IRAQ POSTAL HISTORY 1920s to 1940s by Douglas Armitage and Robert Johnson

The main purpose of this book is to make sense of the airmail fees charged on airmail sent from Iraq to all other countries of the world in the period 1933 to 1946. Extensive tables are set out on 178 pages of this 328 page book. It has B/W illustrations and a laminated cover

The problem that the authors identified was a total lack of information about many of the air fees and changes to them especially in the period of the Second World War. The availability of original postal information in the English version of the many successive issues of the Iraqi Government Gazette was the clue.

Iraq was a country like Italy which continued to charge air fees in addition to surface postage long after countries such as the United Kingdom converted to combined air and surface rates. It became apparent at an early stage of writing the tables that all the other postal rates and fees, internal and external would have to be included in order that calculations of postage rates seen on covers could be accomplished.

It was also evident that to put these air fees and postal rates and fees into context a reader would need narratives which described the involvement of various airlines in providing air services to and from Iraq as air routes to the Far East, Africa, the Americas and Australia and New Zealand were developed. Inevitably references to the position in the 1920's became essential and much detail of the 1920's is in fact included both in the narrative and in the supporting tables.

POSTMAN'S ROOTS. 2000 years of Letter Carrying in Breconshire by Mike Scott Archer

Handbook to accompany an exhibition in Brecknock Museum & Art Gallery March 1st to April 13th 2003

The handbook was published by the Welsh Philatelic Society, with financial support towards publication from the Stuart Rossiter Trust. '...it will bring back memories of those more recent times when the Post Office was one of the main arteries giving life not only to the village communities but also to those many commercial enterprises within the County'.

The handbook is illustrated with many maps starting with Roman Forts & Roads in Breconshire, medieval Drovers trails, Postal and Railway routes. There are lists of villages & post offices, and illustrations of postmarks and pillar boxes.

There is an excellent compact history of the postal service in the UK. The handbook is a good 30 page summary of the growth and changing role of the Royal Mail, and its social interactions.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE POSTAL HISTORY OF DENMARK 1624 – 1950 by David Cornelius

The first publication in English to provide a detailed historical background to the growth of the Danish postal services, mail routes and postage rates for both inland and foreign mails within Europe.

Catalogue of Postal History Books published by the Stuart Rossiter Trust

Transport of the mails is covered in some detail (including a good section on the Anglo-Danish mails), together with the Wartime and military mails. There is a good range of illustrations drawn from the author's own collection, with useful explanations of rates, postmarks and accountancy markings. Appendices include extensive tables of inland and foreign postage rates for the difficult period before 1875. Throughout the book, references to further information are provided in footnotes, and there is a selective bibliography.

The book is designed to provide a "first reference" volume for both the advanced collector, in their research of a puzzling item, and a guide for the new collector. Much of the information has not previously appeared in English.

"The author has spent more than thirty years collecting and studying this area, and it shows in the quality of the information provided. This is a 'meaty' book that should be read, studied and then reread and restudied"
Joe Hahn American Philatelist September 2004

"David Cornelius has compiled an astonishing amount of information about a range of complex topics, and he presents us with a work of true scholarship...this is a superb work of reference, and a credit to its Author, and to its publisher..." Gibbons Stamp Monthly December 2005

THE POSTAL HISTORY OF SPANISH NEW ORLEANS by Yamil H Kouri Jnr

A comprehensive study of the mail system and written communications in New Orleans during the Spanish period (1763-1804). It includes the inner workings of the mail system, postal markings, rates, ships, and covers.

This represents the most detailed and complete analysis of the finances of any Spanish colonial postal administration. The mail carried privately and by the postal systems of England, France, and the United States is also covered, as well as the transition to the U.S. postal administration.

"This is a splendid book, which will assuredly become the standard reference work on Spanish New Orleans..." Gibbons Stamp Monthly December 2005

"The author has taken a most arcane subject and through diligent research has produced a well written and documented book...it would be a boon if other areas of Spanish Colonial America were given such a thorough treatment." Joe Hahn American Philatelist September 2004

"Considering this book is a pioneering effort. It is amazingly comprehensive. I doubt that much information could be added to the work, aside from the discovery of an occasional new cover from the Spanish period turning up. From that standpoint, the work covers an important segment of US postal history." Richard B. Graham Linn's Stamp News August 2004

THE POSTAL HISTORY OF THE ARMY OF THE BLACK SEA 1918 –1923 by John Slingsby

A comprehensive study of the postal history and associated military history of the British and Indian occupation forces in the Balkans, Turkey, South Russia and Transcaucasia. Also covered are the Army's brief connections with Transcaspia and the North Persia Force.

Part 1 of the book deals with the postal history of the army and field post offices of the British and Indian Army Postal Services in this Near and Middle East theatre. All known locations and dates of use of the post offices are recorded, together with notes of grey areas still to be resolved.

Part 2 gives the order of battle by the various command headquarters and is followed in Part 3 by the locations and movements of the mounted and infantry regiments.

"As a reference work it is nothing short of superb and seems certain to stand the test of time as a valuable tool for the postal historian...it is so amazingly thorough...All in all it is a magnificent accomplishment." Gibbons Stamp Monthly April 2006

"The author has done a splendid job of drawing upon military history to facilitate the understanding of postal history. Highly recommended." Collectors Club New York, April 2005

THE AIRMAILS OF MALTA by D Ward. Malta Study Circle Study Paper No 29. 2000

This study updates information previously available on the air mail services of Malta. It covers the period from the first early flights until 1998 and the international aspects of mail carried to the east, Australia and South Africa.

The effect of World War II and the implications on the postal services are covered as are all the known postal markings, air mail rates and air mail postage stamps. The Study Paper brings together the combined knowledge of the Study Circle and this is a useful monograph for those interested in air mails, the Mediterranean and, of course, Malta. Well illustrated, showing covers, handstamps, and instructional marks with a useful bibliography.

"An interesting book for collectors of Malta as it gives data on the airfields of Malta from 1916 also early flights and airmail services, the Zeppelin era and wartime airmails plus handstamps, postal markings, airmail adhesives, and other useful Information. Well illustrated." Stamp Lover November 2000

"We have come to expect good quality publications from the Stuart Rossiter Trust at a very reasonable price, and this volume is no exception..." Gibbons Stamp Monthly July 2001

BRITISH INDIA POSTAL STATIONERY by Derek Lang

This is an illustrated history and listing of postal stationery issued in India up to Independence in 1947.

It is the culmination of over 30 years research which resulted in the four volume work "The guide to the postal stationery of India". Since then the amount of new information and feed-back has made it possible to produce this updated and fresh study of the subject.

It is the seminal work with chapters covering postcards, envelopes, newspaper wrappers, Victorian letter sheets, air letter sheets, airgraphs, telegraph forms and a chapter on post-Independence. A final chapter covers collecting extensions including specimens, dies, punches, essays and proofs, bands, labels and parcel wrappers used abroad and by the states. The book is profusely illustrated and cross-indexed with the Higgins & Gage and Jain reference numbers.

The original four volume version on which this is based was awarded a Bronze medal at London 1980 and a Silver at India International Exhibition 1980. Bronze and Silver Bronze medals were awarded at the British Philatelic Federation in 1979 and 1980

"...the Author is to be congratulated on producing such a detailed work to add to his already impressive list of books on Indian Postal Stationery" London Philatelist October 1998.

"...a work which will be the standard on the subject." Stamp Magazine September 1998.

EARLY FORCES MAIL by Barrie Jay

The contents cover a span of 400 years starting with the 30 years war, touching on the War of the Grand Alliance, the War of the Spanish Succession, the War of the Austrian Succession, the Seven Years War and the Napoleonic period (including the invasion of Ireland and Wales). There is also a section on prisoner of war mail including details on the regulations governing this.

This is based on the illustrated talk given by Barrie Jay, Past President of RPSL on the occasion of the inaugural Stuart Rossiter Memorial Lecture Catalogue of Postal History Books published by the Stuart Rossiter Trust in 1995. The contents have been enlarged by other material from his collection.

The subject is covered in a masterly way, combining the history of the period, with the history of written communications, often giving graphic eye witness accounts of historic events supported by material from Barrie's wonderful collection. A fascinating introduction to the subject which will appeal both to the serious postal historian and those interested in military and social history.

"...Contains important information on the carriage of mail during the many European wars of the period" London Philatelist. February 1998.

"...this book [is] a first-class addition to libraries of those interested in the postal history of wars generally as well as one or more of the ones covered." Military Postal History Bulletin. Spring 1998.

"...the book is well illustrated with maps and contemporary illustrations as well as the letters. It will be appreciated by military and social as well as postal historians." G.S.M. May 1998.

EXPRESS MAIL, AFTER PACKETS and LATE FEES in INDIA before 1870 by Max Smith and Robert Johnson

The book presents original information into a hitherto unresearched field using data from the Asia, Pacific and Africa Collections in the British Library. It describes the Overland mail within India particularly between Bombay, Calcutta and Madras and the ways by which a sender could get mail across India quickly in either direction.

The period covered is from about 1840 up to about 1870, as mail cart and railway services gradually took over carriage of the Overland mail. For the first time, the Express, After Packet and Late Fee services and charges are described from official sources and their successes and failures explained.

A great deal of background information is also provided in appendices, which reproduce many extracts from original documents including the Post Office Annual Reports of the period. These discuss the changing routes of the Overland mail across India and the effects on postal services of the Sepoy Mutiny of 1857-58.

Other appendices give the dates and closing times of Expresses to and from Bombay and the After Packet from Calcutta in connection with the Overland mail and the growth of the railway system.

The final appendix discusses the service Thomas Waghorn provided across Egypt between the Mediteranean and the Red Sea.

KEEPING IN TOUCH. Communications through County Kildare before 1860 by N.P.J. Morrin

This book is the first publication to deliberately attempt to chronicle the means by which contact was maintained between the inhabitants of Co. Kildare and the rest of the country and beyond before 1860. It focuses particularly on the early postal systems and examines the carriage of mail through the county by foot, horse and coach.

It also examines the impact of the coming of the canals and railway on the postal system and the terrible effect of the Great Famine of 1845-8. This book is intended both for the serious postal historian in search of detailed information about the postal charges, post offices and marks used in the county and also for local and social historians seeking an understanding about the means of communication available without the need to undertake long and sometimes perilous journeys along the roads of Ireland

Awards: Stampa, Dublin, 1998, Silver Medal

"The book is a 'must' for the Irish or Kildare specialist and is an example to us all of how such a book should be presented and written" London Philatelist October 1998.

"...excellently illustrated with well-chosen maps, topographical views as well as the postal markings and interesting covers. ...a well-researched book." G.S.M. August 1998.

LETTER RECEIVERS OF LONDON 1652 -1857. A history of their offices and handstamps within the General, Penny and Twopenny Posts by Hugh Feldman

The definitive study of the subject; this monumental work contains approaching 1000 pages.

The core is an alphabetical list of the Receiving Houses, showing their exact locations, accompanied by a map of the period, details of the Receiver, illustrations of the handstamps including examples of letters, and a considerable amount of supplementary information of interest to the local and social historian as well as the serious postal historian.

The workings of the post during the period are explained in a 50 page introduction and there are also over 100 pages of annexes providing additional information. Awards include the Crawford Medal from The Royal Philatelic Society, London in 1998 and won the Rowland Hill Award from the British Philatelic Trust in 1998 and Gold Medal and Vera Trinder Rosebowl special literature prize at Stampshow 2000, London.

"The core of the book is an absolute mine of fascinating information - all you would ever want to know about the Receiving Houses and their incumbents. The retail price seems high but is actually very good value for money as this book is highly recommended to any student of postal history or London's local history." Gibbons Stamp Monthly May 2000.
"Essential reading for the true postal historian" London Philatelist February 1999.

"This book really is superb: it comes as no surprise that its author should have been acknowledged in the Rowland Hill Awards" Stamp Magazine June 1999.

author's collection and written up in his own hand A number of official postal regulations and rates are reproduced and the Introduction describes the way that research of this kind can be carried out.

Part I covers mail by ship's bag to Britain and Part II, mail to the ships abroad. A valuable tool for researchers on naval history and for social and postal historians

"Readers will find each entry absorbing, there being an extensive amount of historical (i.e non-postal history) detail included, but which is not excessive." London Philatelist March 1996.

A POSTAL HISTORY OF THE PRISONERS OF WAR AND CIVILIAN INTERNEES IN EAST ASIA DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR - Volume 1 Singapore and Malaya 1942 - 1945 The Changi Connection by David Tett

The chapters in the book are: Prelude to the Captivity; The Prison Camps; The mails that were returned; At home; The Bureau of Record and Enquiry; Three personal postal histories; The cards from POWs in Singapore; The mail to Civilian Internees in Singapore; Mails to those who were not returned; Unauthorised mails; Japanese Postal Stationery; Some went home.

The author combines the general history of the period with personal references from individual correspondences to give detailed context to the postal arrangements for POWs and internees into and out of Singapore and Malaya.

There are seven Appendices dealing with detailed aspects of the postal history such as cards and covers addressed to POWs in Malaya and Singapore and Australian Red Cross Society Directions for Mail.

This is the first of several volumes to deal with the subject of the main title.

There is a good index and bibliography.

THE TRAVELLING POST OFFICES OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA by A.D. Presgrave

Starting with a section on the road mails of the State, the book goes on to describe the development of it's railways and the operations and functions of the Travelling Post Offices of South Australia.

There is detailed information on the specification of the specially adapted rolling stock. Each stage of the development of the network is covered very thoroughly and is accompanied by the details of the timetables and schedules as well as examples of all the known handstamps.

This work will be of interest not only to the postal historian studying the development of mail systems in South Australia but also those interested in the railway itself. There are 32 pages in annexe providing information on postal regulations as well as a useful index.

Awards include a Vermeil at Trains 1999 and a large silver at Philexfrance 1999, and National Philatelic Literature Exhibition, New Zealand, 2005, Large Silver.

THE ROYAL MARINES : Home and Abroad a Postal History 1664-1994 by Bob Swarbrick

The book covers 91 events involving the Royal Marines starting with their formation in 1664 as The Duke of York and Albany's Maritime Regiment of Foot and a letter of 1666 and ending with South Georgia in 1994 where training in mountain and cold weather warfare was conducted.

Each of the 91 stories is illustrated with entires or covers including the letters with some transcripts and often a portrait of the writer or addressee with a picture of a ship or shore location. The stories have been painstakingly researched and make a fascinating read of the social as well as the postal history of the Royal Marines.

This is an important monograph for social historians and an opportunity for the postal historian to glimpse material seldom seen.

Crossroads at Panama by Phil Kenton

The short sea route to the East and the development of the Panama railway.

The Author is an acknowledged expert on the maritime postal history of this part of the world in his books and award winning displays. This 40 page article outlines the advantages of Panama as a crossing point and short sea route to the east for trade and the carriage of mail. The study examines the proposals of 1810 for the Canal project and other alternatives. Details are given of the construction of the railroad in 1846 and the postal conventions of 1847 and 1871. This is an important article for those interested in maritime mail and the development of the short route to the east. The article is illustrated by a large number of letters of the period.

Westphalia and the Grand Duchy of Berg by Cornelis Muys

Postal communications between Russia, Prussia and France and Holland 1790 - 1814

This study of 11 pages examines the postal routes from the east to the west in the northern part of middle Europe and, more specifically, postal communications between Prussia and Russia and Holland and France between 1790 and 1814. The area concerned was extremely complicated politically and this article considers the postal conventions of the time and the routes they imposed on the carriage of mails. The Author is an acknowledged expert on the routes and rates of Europe and makes this an important article for postal historians interested in the Napoleonic period with reduced size illustrations.

"All are excellent examples of detailed postal history studies of well defined areas.....The article by Geoff Lovejoy deals more with social than postal history....Excellent delivery of information....I urge all postal historians to buy the volume (and its successors)" London Philatelist Feb 2001.

The Goldfields of Victoria by Rod Moreton

The development of the gold fields is described leading to the need for post offices some of which were short lived.

The story starts with the discovery of gold in New South Wales in 1851. Later that year the State of Victoria was created out of part of New South Wales and rewards offered for the discovery of gold. This is illustrated with covers to and from the diggings as well as maps, engravings and extracts from papers of the period. The story includes murder and arson and gives a glimpse of life from the first fifty years of this Australian gold rush era.

Pre Soviet Russia Registered and associated Mail by Ian Baillie

There was an insured mail system in Russia in 1691 which continued into the early 20th Century when it withered. The Russian registration system is generally accepted as starting in 1871 and the story of its development to about 1918 is told.

This is a survey of the development of the registration systems and their postal rates profusely illustrated with the various types of registration labels including TPO labels, ship mail, Zemstvo, field post and ending with a small section on Finland, Poland and Russian POs abroad.

Early Mails between Constantinople and the West by Hans Smith

1453. The postal history begins with an entire of 1453. The "capitulations" (minor treaties) granted to foreigners began in 1454 with Venice and in later centuries these formed the basis of the mail services between foreign post offices in the City and the rest of the world. The history over the next 400 years is summarised and interspersed with entire. Some postal rates from 1742 and 1788 are recorded as are some postal markings from 1780. Finally the Napoleonic Posts ending in 1815 are described.

The Railways of Finland and their Postal Service by Brian McCloy

Finnish State Railway Postal Sorting Wagons or TPO's from 1870 to 1995

The Finnish State Railways were established in 1862. Postal Sorting Wagons were introduced in 1870 on the line from Helsinki to St Petersburg and the station numbers on that line are given for 4 periods between 1870 and 1889. These numbers were incorporated into the railway datestamps. This treatment continues with other railway lines as they were opened. The changes following independence in 1917 are described until the last travelling post office ceased in 1995.

Wartime Cross Channel and North Sea Mails 1793-1815 by Geoff Oxley

Cross Channel Packet services 1793 to 1815

Prior to the war between Great Britain and France which began in 1793, there were packet services from Dover to Calais and Ostende and from Harwich to Helvoetsluis. The story of what happened to these services is treaty in December 1851 between Russia and the new German-Austrian Postal Union. A new postal convention was signed between Great Britain and Prussia in October 1862. In 1866 Prussia defeated Austria in a short war leading to the formation of the North German Confederation so the next postal convention was between Great Britain and the North German Confederation in 1870. The German Empire was established on 1 January 1871 leading to a new postal convention with Russia in 1872. Rates for

The Postal History of the Island of Réunion by Peter Kelly

The background, development and postal history of the railway on the French Island of La Réunion 1882 - 1956.

The story starts with some background about the topography of the island and its commercial development from 1850 to 1950 leading to the construction of the railway which was completed in 1882. The postal history is divided into three phases 1882-1902, 1902-1929, 1929-1956. In the first phase there were two railway lines one from St Denis to St Pierre the other from St Denis to St Benoit. These were joined in 1902. The railway line to St Benoit was closed in 1952 and to St Pierre in 1956. The role of the Convoyeurs and the postmarks used in each of the three phases are described and illustrated. The final section describes the Moveable Boxes and the associated handstamps. The story is illustrated with covers and photographs.

Early Seychelles Air Mails 1926-1971 by Keith Fitton

The History of Airmail Services into and out of Seychelles up to the opening of the International Airport in 1971.

Throughout this time most airmail to and from the island ended or started its journey by sea. Before World War II the sea journey was either to or from Mombasa or Bombay. An RAF station was established during the war but although they were not authorised to carry civilian mail, some was carried if properly censored. The introduction of the airgraph service in 1942 and the airletter service in 1944 is described with extracts from the Government Gazette. In the postwar years the sea journey to and from Mombasa and Bombay continued. With the construction of a USAF Satellite Tracking Station in 1963, an amphibian used to provide a weekly airmail service to Mombasa which took unregistered letters for the civilian population. The first airmail flight in 1971 from the new international airport is described. Throughout the airmail rates are explained and illustrated by covers.

The Travelling Post Offices of Great Britain by Harold S Wilson CEng MIMechE

The Travelling Post Offices of Great Britain 1837 - 2004

The development of the West Coast Services began with the opening of the Grand Junction Railway from Birmingham to Warrington in 1837 and eventually extended from Euston to Glasgow and on to Aberdeen. The apparatus used is described together with the late fee and the Experimental Sorting Carriage. Then follows a description of the development of the Travelling Post Office services tracing the amalgamation of various early railway companies into the London & North Western Railway Company in 1846. Details of the various postal markings applied are clearly pictured and described for both the Up and Down TPOs until closure in 2004.

The Republic of Venice Posts by Richard Harlow

A brief account of some of the postal arrangements serving the Republic until 1797.

There were some 50 or more courier companies operating into and out of Venice - one of the earliest being the Padua couriers of 1158. Letters of the 1300s are very scarce particularly those written before 1350. Letters of the 1400s are a little easier than the 1500s while the 1600s are not too difficult. This account describes briefly the Rome Post (1533), the Milan Post (1584), the Flanders Post (1541), the Post of Vienna (1579), the Post of Lyon (1550), the Swiss Post (1615), the Polish Post (1558), the Ferrara Post (1573) and the Constantinople Post. German East Africa by Michael Farrant

German East Africa Wartime Emergency Measures 1915 & 1916

On the outbreak of war in August 1914, the German Colonies were cut off from the fatherland and were all eventually occupied by Allied forces. In the case of German East Africa the colonial authorities were able to continue to function as previously without the assistance of Germany and only gradually did the blockade by the Royal Navy have any real effect. One of the first shortages to be experienced was the diminishing stock of postage stamps as supplies could not be received from Germany. In order to maintain an effective postal system within the Colony, emergency measures were instituted and these were the facility of "cash franking" and the use of prepaid envelopes. Both measures were implemented solely to save the use of postage stamps and are described in detail.

The United States of America: Suspension of mail services to other countries in Wartime, Revolution and Civil Commotion by Robert Johnson

The article mostly concerns civilian mails to, through or from United States citizens or residents which were affected by events of a military or a revolutionary nature and is not intended to be descriptive of mails to or from soldiers, sailors or airmen. The article deals with the American Civil War, the Spanish American War of 1898, the first and second World Wars and their aftermath, the Korean War, the events in Hungary in 1956 and the invasion of the Falkland Islands. It ends with the postal wars of Catalogue of Postal History Books published by the Stuart Rossiter Trust the 1960s, the problems in Iran in 1979, trade union disputes, subversive activities and fraudulent mail. There are very useful appendices listing the conflicts for which suspended mail should exist and giving the dates when the mail was suspended to various countries. There are 41 figures illustrating covers with service suspended markings.

Mail Routes through the Baltic States by Geoff Lovejoy

This is a detailed monograph relating to the Horse Posts and the documentation of the Coach Post in the nineteenth century Baltic States before the advent of railways. It begins with a map of postal routes circa 1796 and shows several covers with various markings. Further maps of circa 1831 and 1850 show how the post routes changed. A public notice of 1821 in German and also translated into English is illustrated describing the stage coach service. About 10 other documents in Russian and German are illustrated with English translations give details of the coach service including timetables. In all there are 37 figures showing covers from the period with postal markings up to 1855 and providing an explanation of the rates.

The West Indies & Pacific Steam-Ship Company: The Mail Contracts 1865-1888 by Colin Tabcart

The article describes the 5 Contracts that the Post Office entered into with the West India and Pacific Steam Ship Company between 1865 and their termination in 1888. The contracts concerned the carriage of mail from Liverpool to various places in the West Indies initially to Belize via Jamaica and to Tampico via Port au Prince. Later contracts included places on the Caribbean shore of South America and the 5th contract included Colon with the connection to Panama on the Pacific coast. Reports of sailings are very sketchy or missing from various sources consulted so it is not until 1874 to 1888 that details of sailings are given. These show the dates of departure or arrival at the different ports with an extensive number of footnotes providing extra clarification.

The Post Office : the other side of the Counter or what the Customer does not see by Robert Johnson

The article is based on the Stuart Rossiter Trust lecture of November 2006 and describes some of the work and official rules that a postal clerk might have to deal with in the course of a day including letters, parcels, postal and money orders, the savings bank, the telegraph and telephone, insurance, licences, airmails and savings banks. These are profusely illustrated with pictures of forms and of pages from books of postal regulations. The forms are from Great Britain, and many other countries around the world are represented by for example a savings form from Southern Rhodesia, a French Service Suspended label concerning nuclear tests in the Pacific, Belgian and French social security forms, a Netherlands authority to collect mail card, an Indian radio licence, some of which bear postage stamps.

postal history of the area. This comprehensive article traces the routes and postal rates up to 1877 when the Colony joined the General Postal Union. Both inland mail and mail to overseas destinations are dealt with. From the VOC Company period (1789 -1808), through the French (1808 - 1811) and British (1811 - 1816) Occupations and finally the Dutch Colonial time. Nearly all the pages bear a cover to illustrate a rate or route and there are many tables which provide this information. There is an exhaustive section dealing with the Dutch East Indies Landmail Labels - the Worlds' first Postage Due Stamp! The considerable bibliography gives testament to the scope of research and translation that has been needed to present this study in English.
