5.00 pm, Thursday 28th April

Yes, it's back again after Covid, now held when the evenings are light

The Stuart Rossiter Trust is pleased to announce that the 2022 Memorial Lecture will be held at 5.00pm on Thursday 28th April at the home of the Royal Philatelic Society London, 15 Abchurch Lane, London, EC4N 7BW, when

Simon Richards FRPSL

will give a talk entitled

The Influence of Military History on Postal History: Anglo-French Rivalry in the Caribbean

For over 100 years Britain and France struggled for control of the lesser Antilles islands and the spices and sugar that they produced. In a succession of conflicts, their rivalry would involve other powers, Spain, Holland and the fledgling United States. A struggle fought mainly at sea, communications were vital. A secure mail packet service became a necessity and the lecture will examine the introduction of the British packet service and how its development was shaped by this military rivalry.
